We submit article entitle "Characteristics of nongluten noodles from modified cocoyam (Xanthosoma sagittifolium) and porang (Amorphophallus oncophyllus)" for publish in Italian Journal of Food Science. All authors have read and approved this manuscript to publish in this journal. This paper is not recognized for publication in another journal and submitted for Italian Journal of Food Science. We hope you accept our article for publish in this journal because this study aims this study aimed to determine the right formulation of dry noodles on different proportions of modified cocoyam flour and porang flour as well as the use of egg in terms of the physicochemical and organoleptic properties.

What this study adds:

- The proportion of modified cocoyam flour with porang greatly determined the texture of the noodles produced.
- The best treatment results in terms of chemical, physical, and organoleptic parameters are noodle products with 85% modified cocoyam flour formulation, 15% porang flour, and 10% egg addition.

Thank you

Dedin ` Finatsiyatull Rosida:

Your manuscript was reviewed carefully by myself and referred to reviewers for comment. On the basis of Reviewers comments, I have decided that the manuscript requires major revisions before it can be considered for publication. Reviewer comments appear at the end of this letter.

I do not insist that you adopt all reviewer suggestions, but we do ask that you consider each carefully and explain your reasons for rejecting any one of them. Even if you feel that no change is justified for a specific point, please indicate your reason for not agreeing with the reviewer.

However, the revision of the text does not guarantee an automatic acceptance of the manuscript. If you decide to revise the work, please send the revised text with the underlined modifications and a separate file with all the answers to the reviewer/s.

We expect the revision in one month (before August 12, 2021).

NOTE: please format the text in accordance with Guidelines of the Journal. We cannot accept text not correctly formatted.

Further the author/s must include in a separate file an English certificate of the revised version of the manuscript.

We look forward to seeing your paper in the Italian Journal of Food Science.

Sincerely,

Simone Vincenzi

Best regards

Dedin ` Finatsiyatull Rosida:

Sorry, I didn't attach the reviewer comments. You can find at the end of this email

Reviewer D:

This manuscript examined the properties of noodles made with the mixture modified cocoyam (Xanthosoma sagittifolium) and porang (Amorphophallus oncophyllus). There are some comments:

In general, English must be professionally edited by native English speakers. The manuscript is poorly constructed and difficult to read and follow. Methods and results should follow the same sequence.

Abstract must be rewritten, provide some sentences for methodology used.

Scientific names should be italic (please check throughout the manuscript).

L15, this manuscript did not examine any health benefit of the noodle so do not make the conclusion in such way.

Dear authors, I made a final check on the revised paper you sent for evaluation on IJFS. During the revision you didn't reply to several issues proposed by the reviewers. In the attached file you will find some correction and comments regarding some missing information (references and protocol for organoleptic analysis, for example). However the main drawback is the English level of writing (that was one of the issues raised by one reviewer): I suggest to submit the paper to the evaluation of a native English speaker. I remember that before the final acceptance of the paper you should present a certification of English proofreading. Best regards Prof. Simone Vincenzi Co-Editor Italian Jpurnal of Food Science  Revised+Manuscript.docx	svincenzi 2021-09-22 10:24 AM
